

Mathieu Bich

"French magic invention driven by elegant unexpected principles"

Close-Up Magic | Mentalism

Biography

Mathieu Bich is a French magician, inventor and consultant known for developing effects from unusual principles rather than familiar technique alone. His current official site sells original work and offers lectures and workshops, while its biography documents international teaching since 1998, a 2006 FISM invention award, consulting for David Blaine and David Copperfield and co-founding Theory11. Bich won a Fool Us trophy during the original UK series with his celebrated Spreadwave routine. A performer-controlled contact form supports professional enquiries, though the site does not establish a current home city, public performance calendar or direct email in indexed text.
