

Stanley Zhou

"Young card craft shaped by curiosity and disciplined practice"

Close-Up Magic

Biography

Stanley Zhou is a young magician who began practicing in 2018 and describes magic as a way to connect with people across language barriers. His performer-controlled site says he submitted a Fool Us audition on his sixteenth birthday and collects videos tracing his development through card work, riffle stacking and visual pieces. The television appearance earned a Fool Us trophy and confirms unusual technical confidence at an early stage. Research supports a continuing public magic identity, but the sparse site does not establish professional bookings, a current home base, direct business contact or public performance calendar.
